The foyer was designed in the spirit of a landmark boutique hotel lounge, where the vibe is classic, yet current. The look was achieved with classic furniture pieces mixed with bold art, jewel tones and luxe fabrics.

“My favorite feature is the grand chandelier. Polished rock crystals that mimic blooming flower buds on gold branches is not what you would expect to find in the foyer of a traditional colonial home,” says Emily Fuhrman of Sage and Ginger. “The piece embodies the homeowner’s eclectic spirit and personifies her botanical obsession. It also beautifully marries drama, elegance, bravado and whimsy.” The key design element was the art. Fuhrman painted the paneled walls a crisp, clean bright white to serve as the backdrop for the unexpected and fun range of art displayed. Picture lights above each piece add warmth.

A playful nautical theme resonates throughout this lower-level entertainment space, where broad openings separate different activity zones. Emanating from a generous hall, the rec room features a sleek glass-enclosed wine wall as the backdrop for table tennis. Toward the southeast walkout is an arcade collection, including an antique 1937 World Series baseball game, 1980s pinball, foosball table and current games. Toward the northeast, a stainless steel bar, ping-pong, a TV lounge and a children’s play space. Arch-top French doors open to a pool terrace and the teak wet bar features glass upper cabinets and open shelving, with a grouping of nautical pendant light.
